This film explores the dangerous human impact of social networking, with tech experts sounding the alarm on their own creations.

We tweet, we like, and we share— but what are the consequences of our growing dependence on social media? Big Tech’s promise to keep us connected has given rise to unintended consequences like mental health issues, political polarization, and misinformation that is causing real-world harm.

As digital platforms increasingly become a lifeline to stay connected, Silicon Valley insiders reveal how social media is reprogramming civilization by exposing what’s hiding on the other side of your screen.

The Social Dilemma will be engaging on the following platforms: Facebook | Instagram | Twitter
Hashtag: #TheSocialDilemma

2. ARTS 1004 PUBLIC TALK : What happens in China’s Sea? Wildlife Species vs Human Survival?

ARTS1004 Introduction to Environmental Humanities: Debates in China
What happens in China’s Sea? Wildlife Species vs Human Survival?

The ocean is a crucial component of food security, employment, and economic activity in China. Fisheries and aquaculture make up approximately 10% of China’s total gross agricultural output and employ nearly seven million fishers. However, due to unchecked development and irresponsible aquaculture practices over the past 70 years, fishery habitats and biodiverse marine ecosystems have degraded at an alarming rate: China has lost 57% of its coastal wetlands, 73% of its mangroves, and 80% of its coral reefs since the 1950s. Many species are also endangered during this economic development process. What is the way to sustainably develop the society without sacrificing the nature?

Patrick Yeung, Ocean Program Expert Consultant, WWF-China
Patrick Yeung obtained his PhD in Biology from the Chinese University of Hong Kong. Since 2006, he participated in various research projects on coral, seaweed and dolphin ecology. He joined the marine conservation team of WWF Hong Kong in 2014, to study on marine litter problems as well as coastal biodiversity in Hong Kong through citizen science activities. Based on the survey results, new strategies were developed to solve the marine litter problem with different sectors, and to facilitate the regional cooperation. Besides, he closely engaged with local marine experts and scientists to review Hong Kong’s marine ecological data, which helped identify marine ecological hot spots for government’s reference as the basis for conservation and research works.

He has joined the WWF China’s team in 2019 to advance the ocean conservation program. In particular, he is leading the projects on marine habitat/species conservation, sustainable fisheries and ocean plastic. To tackle the territory wide issues in this big country, WWF is actively building partnerships with NGOs, research institutes, industry associations to provide more comprehensive and in-depth solutions and to amplify influences of ocean conservation. With the Blue Planet Fund established in 2018, the team is supporting effective and innovative marine conservation projects, in order to facilitate the society to take scientific-based actions to protect the ocean together.
